"Ah, fairy boots!" he said. "Yes, I can fix them. Come back tonight and you can watch."

You leave the park and run quickly as Grandmother's apartment. As you approach the building, you see a man with a badge carrying a rifle toward the park. It's one of the new "wolf patrolmen" who have been working to protect people from the bad wolves. As you stop to tell him what happened, you think you see a wolf creeping in the shadows on the street.

The patrolman runs into the park to investigate. You push the button for your grandmother's unit, and a scratchy voice comes through the speaker: "Who is it?"

Grandmother sounds really sick! "Little Red," you say, and she buzzes you up. When you get to her apartment, the door is open just slightly. That's unusual—the always keeps it locked.

You feel the carpet will release your hand, and the great wolf yells. You scramble to your feet and sprint toward the park exit. You see the screech, scaring sounds of the two wolves fighting.

Each book focuses on one adorable character and is filled with multiple heartwarming stories about friendship, family, and life adventures. These tiny tales will bring big smiles to every reader.

Adeline watched as her friends played.

Sally Squirrel and Sarah Skunk were holding hands and singing. Burt Beaver and Peter Possum were playing leapfrog. Molly Mouse and Chipper Chipmunk were racing around a tree.

"Everyone has a best friend but me," said Adeline Porcupine.

"Let's all play hide-and-seek," yelled Danny Armadillo.

Mr. McNutty shook his head.

"Let's watch The Boy Who Couldn't Stop Farting," Rudy Morse said.

Mr. McNutty shook his head again. Then he closed the window shades, turned off the lights, and started the movie.

It was called Serena's Beautiful Ballet Dream. It was about a girl named Serena who dreamed of being in a beautiful ballet. Yuck.

For a few minutes, I watched the girl dancers doing girly twirls with girly tutus and girly ribbons. Then I closed my eyes. I was so tired of girls and their girl stuff.

Suddenly, I felt something gross and wet on each of my cheeks. I also heard disgusting slurping noises.

"I hear disgusting slurping noises," Mr. McNutty said. He turned the lights back on.

I saw where the gross wet things on my cheeks and the disgusting slurping noises had come from. Nicole Finkle was crouched on my left side. Buffy Maynard was crouched on my right side. They were both kissing me.

"Be careful, Tabitha," Grandma Kit said.

I moved through the tall grass and weeds to the edge of the ditch. I knelt down and looked into the dark pipe.

"Frankie?" I called. "Are you in there?"

Frogs answered, but not Frankie.

"Do you see him?" Alfreeda asked.

"No, it's too dark to see anything on this end," I said. "Maybe I'll be able to see better on the other end."

I stood up — but I stood up too quickly. My shoe slipped. I swung my arms in circles, trying not to fall.

It didn't help.

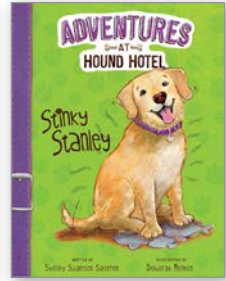

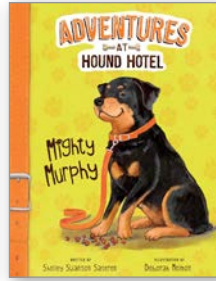

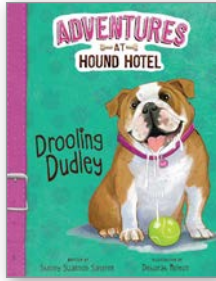

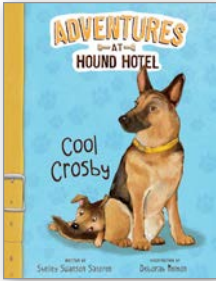

I twisted and flew, face-first, toward the water. The stinky green water.

"Yuih!" I yelled, closing my eyes.

The Mysterious Makers of Shaker Street

For as long as he can remember, Michael Wilson has enjoyed tinkering with things. Now, along with his buddies Liv Hernandez and Leo Hammer, he's formed the Mysterious Makers of Shaker Street. The Makers spend their free time making gadgets out of old equipment and everyday stuff. In between their inventing, the three friends notice their Shaker Street neighbourhood is filled with suspicious characters. Can they stop their sinister neighbours with a new tool, a stop-action movie, or some other ingenious use of engineering and technology? Written to inspire readers to invent on their own, author Stacia Deutsch combines mystery, humour, and friendship in this wonderful series.

CHAPTER ONE

Michael Wilson couldn't sleep. He lay in bed, staring at the ceiling. "Why won't it work?" he muttered out loud to himself.

"Michael, go to sleep already," his best friend Leo Hammer said from the top bunk bed in Michael's room. Leo's dad was out of town for work, so Leo was staying with Michael for the weekend. "Your busy brain is keeping me awake."

"Well, I don't know," the woman said with a little laugh. "Who are they?"

Clementine described her three best friends and then added her phone number to the other woman's cell phone. Her hands were full, so Clementine made sure to save it in the list of contacts. "If you see them, please call me," she said.

"I sure will," the woman said, taking her phone back and jamming it into her back pocket. She gave Clementine a grin as big as the whole outdoors. "We'd better be moving on now."

"Finally!" the man snapped.

They started shuffling off, carrying that big rectangle between them, when Clementine felt a tug under her foot. She'd somehow stepped on the white sheet that was covering their load.

Doubles Trouble

As the boys changed sides, Deion saw Mr. Sumner scribbling something in a notepad. He hated to think what Mr. Sumner might be writing about him.

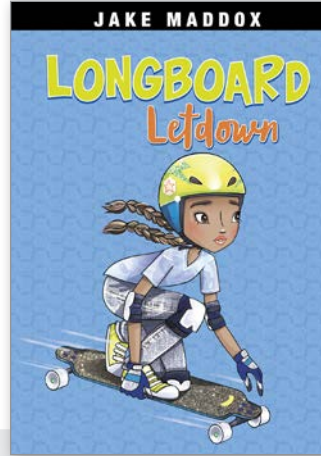

Deion fared slightly better when it was his turn to serve. He scored a couple points but still lost the game. As he prepared to receive Ryan's serve again, he noticed that Mr. Sumner had moved on to watch some kids playing on another court.

Deion felt discouraged. His tryout was not going as he had hoped. At school, he had dominated his classmates. He had thought he stood a good chance to make the rec center team. But the kids going out for the squad were stiffer competition than he had faced in his school's tennis club.

"Okay, Deion, I've seen enough for today," Mr. Sumner said before it was Deion's turn to serve again. "Glad you could come try out."

Longboard Letdown

Mr. Rudder, their sixth-grade English teacher, looked up and cleared his throat.

"Valeria. Mateo. Are you finished with your journal entries?" he asked.

Yeah right, Valeria thought. Writing with her cast on was so slow!

Her thoughts drifted to the longboard crash. Ever since crashing six weeks ago, she had replayed the accident over and over. She couldn't stop thinking about it. Of course this was a bad mindset, but she couldn't help it.

BEEP! Class was over.

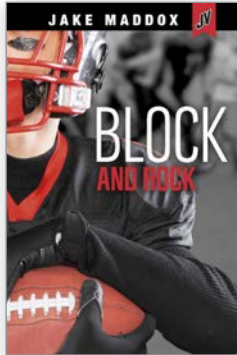

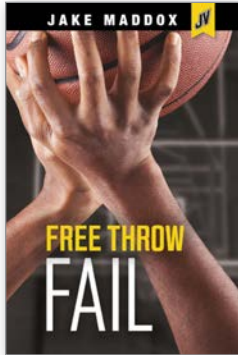

"So," Mateo pressed, "when are you gonna check out my turns? I want to make sure I'm ready for the comp this weekend."

He was talking about the longboarding race — the "comp," short for "competition."

Mike joined in with a thundering bass riff before stepping up to the mic to sing.
 Oh, she was thirteen,
 And a damn queen,
 Half Merg!

 Defending the pass
 Half Merg!
 The trio jammed in Mike's parents' garage under the flicker of fluorescent lights. Rusty tools settled as the trio banged out songs after songs.
 The stretch of motor oil and sweat hung in the air. Even though it was a sunny summer day, the garage door was closed to muffle the sound so the neighbors would not complain.
 After a few tunes, The Tad Zinner took a break.
 Mike set down his bass and went to open the garage door. They grabbed a football from a bin in the corner.
 "Catch," he said, tossing the ball to Justin.

Justin fumbled his drumsticks, and they rattled on the concrete floor as he caught the ball. Then he lobbed it to Miles, who was peeling a Gatorade from a cooler.
 "Anyone else want one?" Miles asked, holding up a bottle.
 Between chugs of Gatorade, they tossed the ball around in the back alley.
 At one point, Miles shouted to Justin, "Go deep."
 Justin was the tallest of the trio. He turned and took off with loping strides. Tony ran after him. Gravel crunched underfoot as they sped down the alley.
 Justin had a head start, but Tony was faster. He darted in front of Justin as Miles watched the ball in a high-arcing pass.
 Tony backpedaled to get under the ball. Just before it dropped into his hands, Justin turned and leaped, reaching up with one hand. The ball hit his palm and stuck with a loud smack!

Spinning Away

But now she had to lose her mother.
 Standing outside the closed kitchen door, Maggie -- so, she decided, it would be just "Maggie" from now on -- could hear the murmurs of her family as they prepared breakfast. Her father's voice rumbled low like thunder, but it was her mother's softer but stronger voice that really made the sound break out on Maggie's palms. She was probably telling Maggie's twin sister, Beatrice, to sit up straight.
 Her mother was always scolding them about their posture.
 In her mind, Maggie could see Beatrice sitting by lifting her chin and straightening her back. Beatrice always did whatever their mother wanted. Beatrice wouldn't complain about the disgusting egg whites and spinach that would nearly be sitting on her plate. Besides, at the moment of figure skating competitions always meant egg whites and spinach.

The thought of having to open up that white and green door made Maggie want to hurt the world and without complaint, though she was going to be a strong female in it.
 Maggie pulled her shoulders back, the thought,
 Well, I hope I'll be so strong. She imagined open the swinging door and pushed in.
 Sunlight streamed into her family's kitchen.
 It was quiet and beautifully decorated. Just like the rest of their home. In her mother stood pouring coffee, the smell of it wafted from filling the air and she was also quiet and beautifully decorated. The scene was all white walls with large pearl earrings and diamonds polished perfectly pink. Maggie didn't understand how anything could ever wear white. She liked her hair too much.
 At first, no one seemed to see Maggie as she entered. Beatrice was in the middle of telling the story about how she had broken her first skate and the day before.

Wire and bead BANGLE

Wire creates a modern look, but adding curls and twists softens the vibe. Try stacking a few color-coordinated bangles for added dimension.

MATERIALS:

16-gauge wire
24-gauge wire
Round metal beads
Twists
14-gauge wire

Tip: Use similar steps to make matching rings, earrings and necklaces.

1. Cut the 24-gauge wire to the desired bracelet length (once around your wrist. Add an extra 20-centimetres (8 inches) for the knotted ends.
2. Use the pliers to bend the wire into a small loop.
3. Thread beads onto the 24-gauge wire and about three feet (ten centimetres are recommended). Secure the other end of the wire into a loop to keep the beads from falling off.
4. Tightly wrap the 16-gauge wire around some ends of the bracelet several times until you reach the first bead. Cover the end of the thin wire in a ring.
5. Wrap the wire between and around the beads until you reach the other end of the bracelet. Cut the wire (check the end under the wraps).

Strong Skeleton

Your bones are like puzzle pieces. They fit together to make up your skeletal system. But unlike puzzle pieces, your bones are alive! They are living, growing tissues. Bones are light enough to let you move easily. They are also strong enough to hold up your body. Your bones make up your skeleton. Your skeleton helps you move, gives you support, and protects your organs.

Fact: Your skeleton makes up about 15 percent of your total weight.

Answer: In a year or two, it will materialize that makes up body pain.

Fun Science

Inspire young scientists with dozens of amazing experiments and activities relating to earth science and weather, forces and motion, light and sound, and material and matter. From producing eerie sound effects with toys to discovering how hot air balloons float, readers will experience key science concepts in action.

SEASONAL DIFFERENCES

Is the weather hot or cold where you live? It could be both! We often plan our lives around seasons. During winter months kids can go sledding. In the summer it's common to swim in pools to cool off. Earth spins, which tells us if it's day or night. While the Earth spins, it orbits the sun too. This orbiting tells us what time of the year it is. Use a few toys to learn more about seasons!

Materials: washable marker, big yellow ball, small blue ball

Steps:

- Place the yellow ball on a table. This is the sun.
- Draw a small dot on the blue ball. This is Earth, and the dot is the North Pole.
- Hold the Earth so the North Pole points towards the sun. If you live on the northern half of the globe, this means it's summer. Your home faces the sun.
- Walk around the table so you're on the other side of the Sun. You are in orbit. Keep the Earth facing the same way. Now it's winter. Your home faces away from the Sun, and it's colder outside.
- Pretend you live near the South Pole. How might the seasons differ from where you live now?
